“How might we more effectively support post-secondary students in discovering wellness resources?”

Where ThoughtSpot Fails

Difficult to tell what resources are available close to you

This is particularly critical in a mobile site for students, as people might be looking for resources on the go, and may not have a vehicle to travel further afield.

Impersonal presentation makes it easy to discount resources

Students working through mental wellness issues often reject advice as being incompatible with their experiences. Grounding recommendations for resources in a personal context can help reduce those barriers.
